

Special Lecture on Political Economy

Special Lecture

- Title: Political Economy of Special Interests
in American Politics
- Date and Time : July 20th (Thur.) 12:00-14:00
- Venue: KDI School Lecture room S306 (3F) and Zoom

Time Table

Time	Contents	Venue
12:00-12:30	Lunch
12:30-14:00	Special Lecture (Political Economy of Special Interests in American Politics)	KDI School S306
	This enlightening session will focus on campaign contributions, lobbying, and their impact on policymaking. Based on groundbreaking research papers, the lecture will delve into topics such as the value of lobbyists, revolving-door effects on legislative productivity, interest group lobbying at different stages, the political impact of the shale gas boom, lobbying after legislation, and intergovernmental dynamics between cities and the federal government. Don't miss this opportunity to gain insights into the complex world of special interests and policymaking. This topic is of great importance to students interested in policymaking in developing countries as it offers valuable insights into the influence of special interests on policymaking processes. Understanding the role of campaign contributions and lobbying in shaping policies can help students navigate the complexities of policymaking in their respective countries, where special interests often exert significant influence. By examining the dynamics of special interest politics in the US context, students can gain a broader perspective and valuable lessons that can be applied to their own policymaking challenges in developing countries.

Registration

- Registration: <https://forms.gle/ob1nRUWqUNBRBMmf9>
- Pre-registration Deadline : by July 18th (Tue) 11:00 am
- Note
 - Lecture and seminar will be conducted in English.
 - Lunch will be provided for offline attendance.
 - Contact : Research Planning Division (hj_joo@kdischool.ac.kr, 044-550-1143)

